

A Home for Tortuga

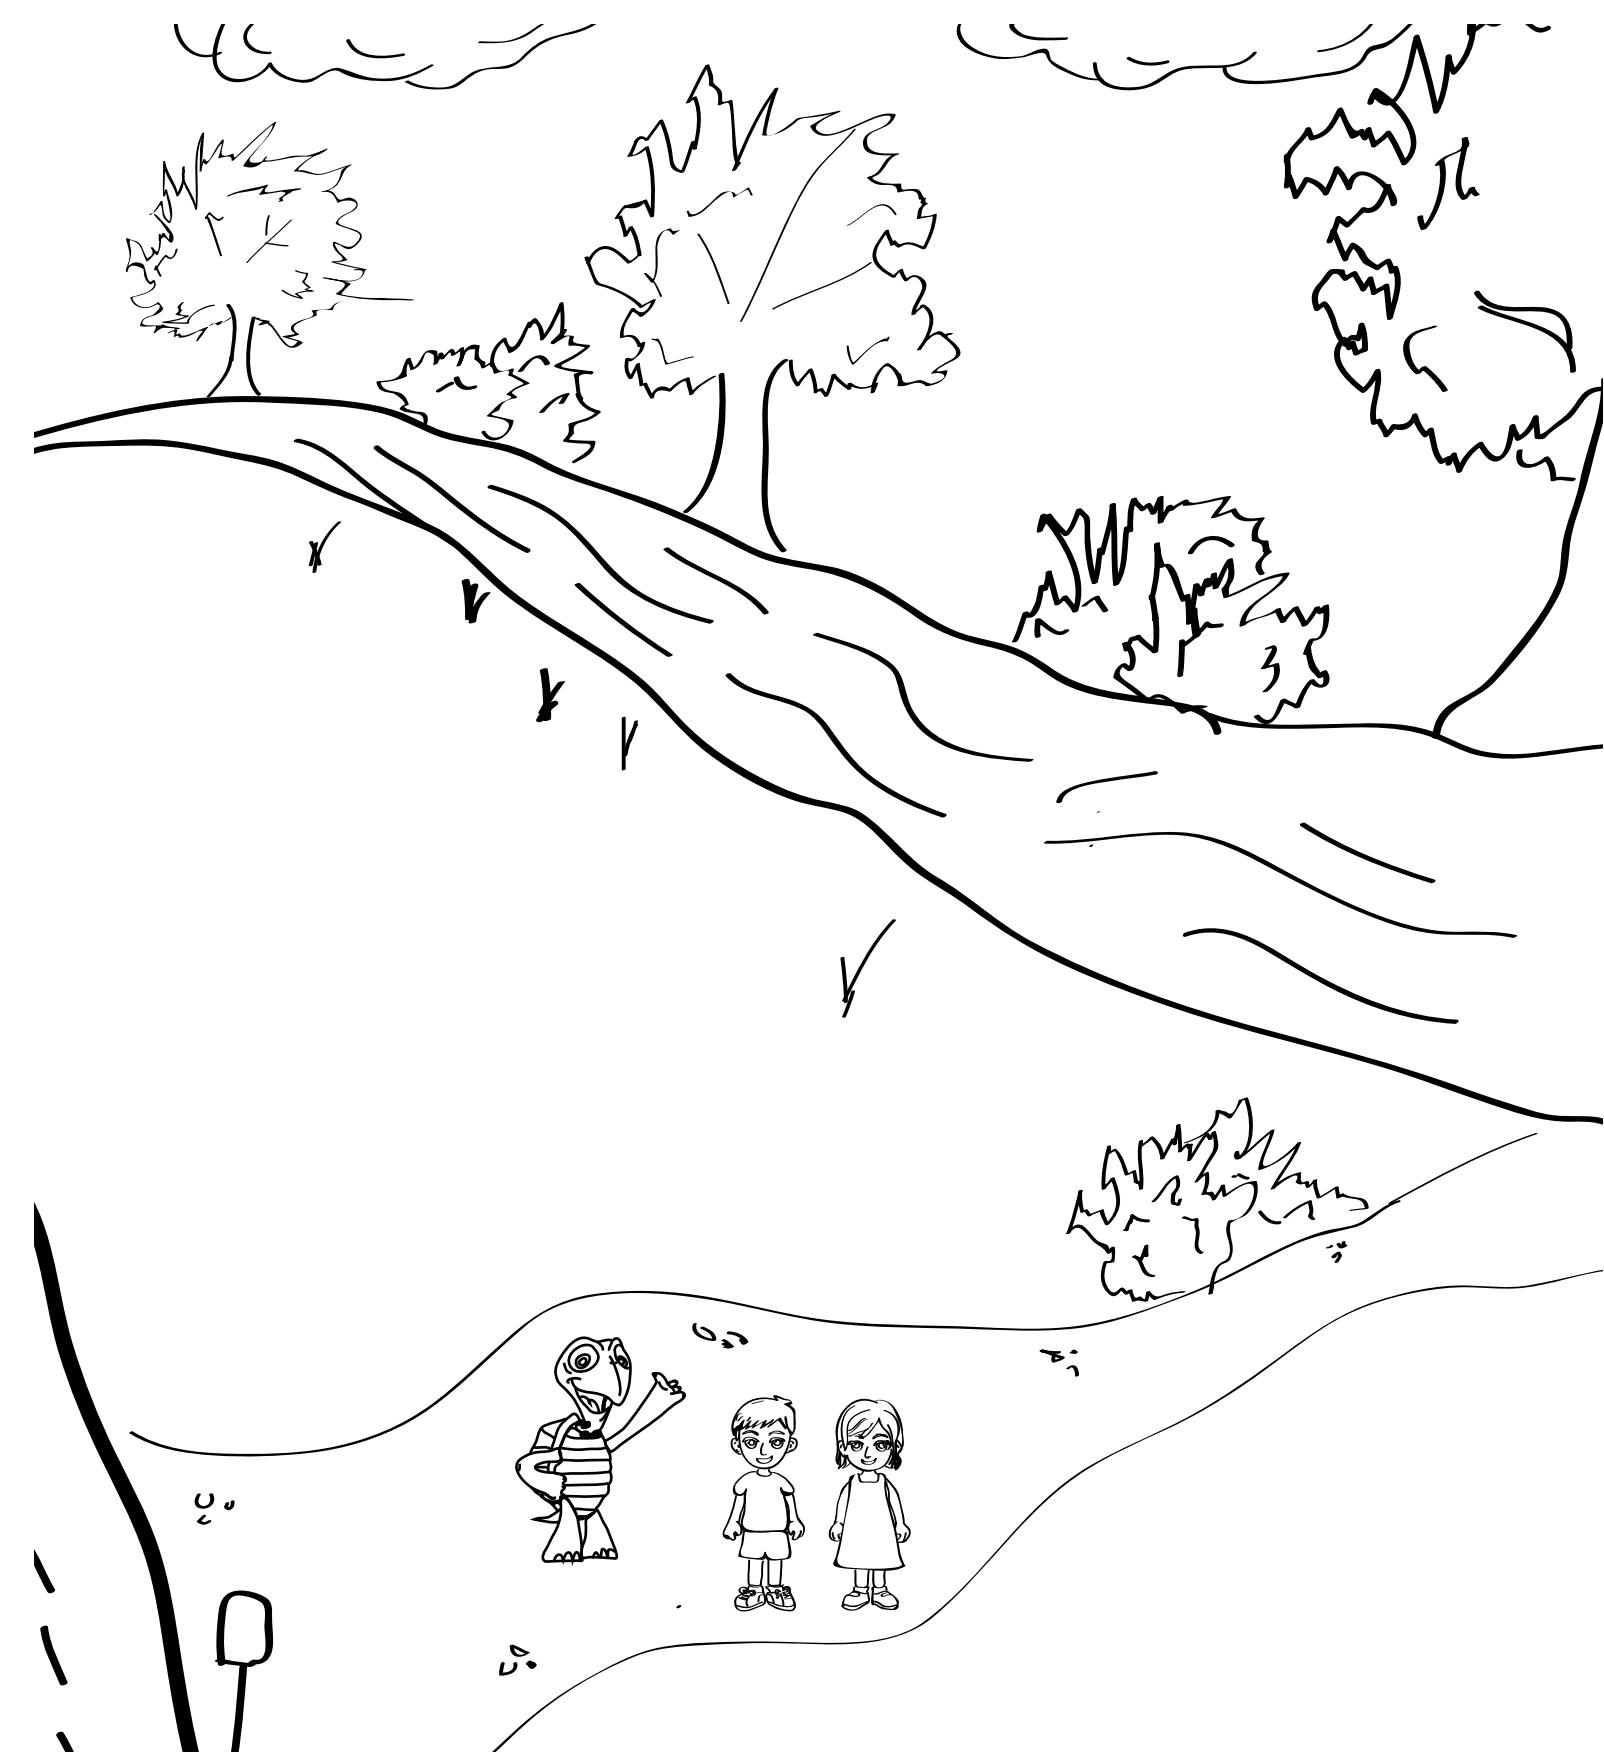

Jordan and Ashley are excited for their friend Tortuga the Turtle to move to Athens.

"Welcome, Tortuga! We're excited you made it to Athens!" they say. "Thanks, kids! How would you like to help me find a place to live?" asks Tortuga. Jordan and Ashley respond with a smile. "Sure thing. We know just the place."

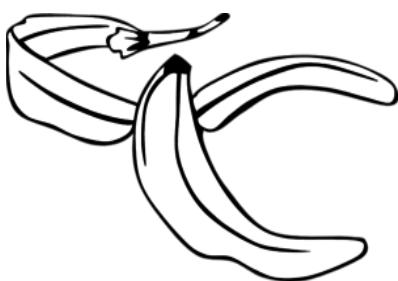

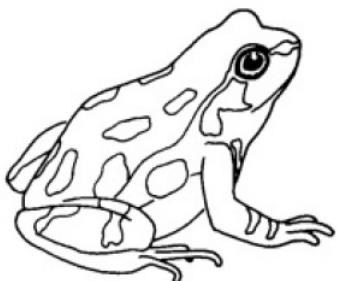

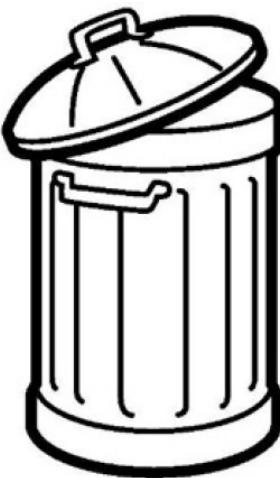

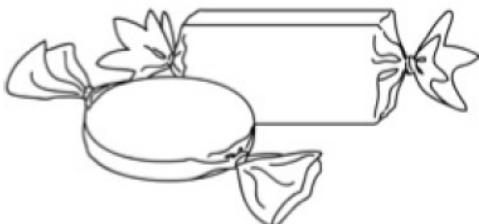

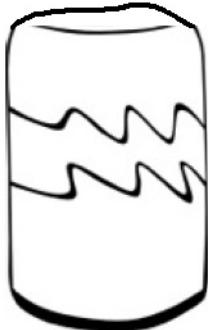

Jordan and Ashley take Tortuga to Elephant Creek. "Wow, I like these woods!" Tortuga says. "The shade will keep me nice and cool during the hot Georgia summer."

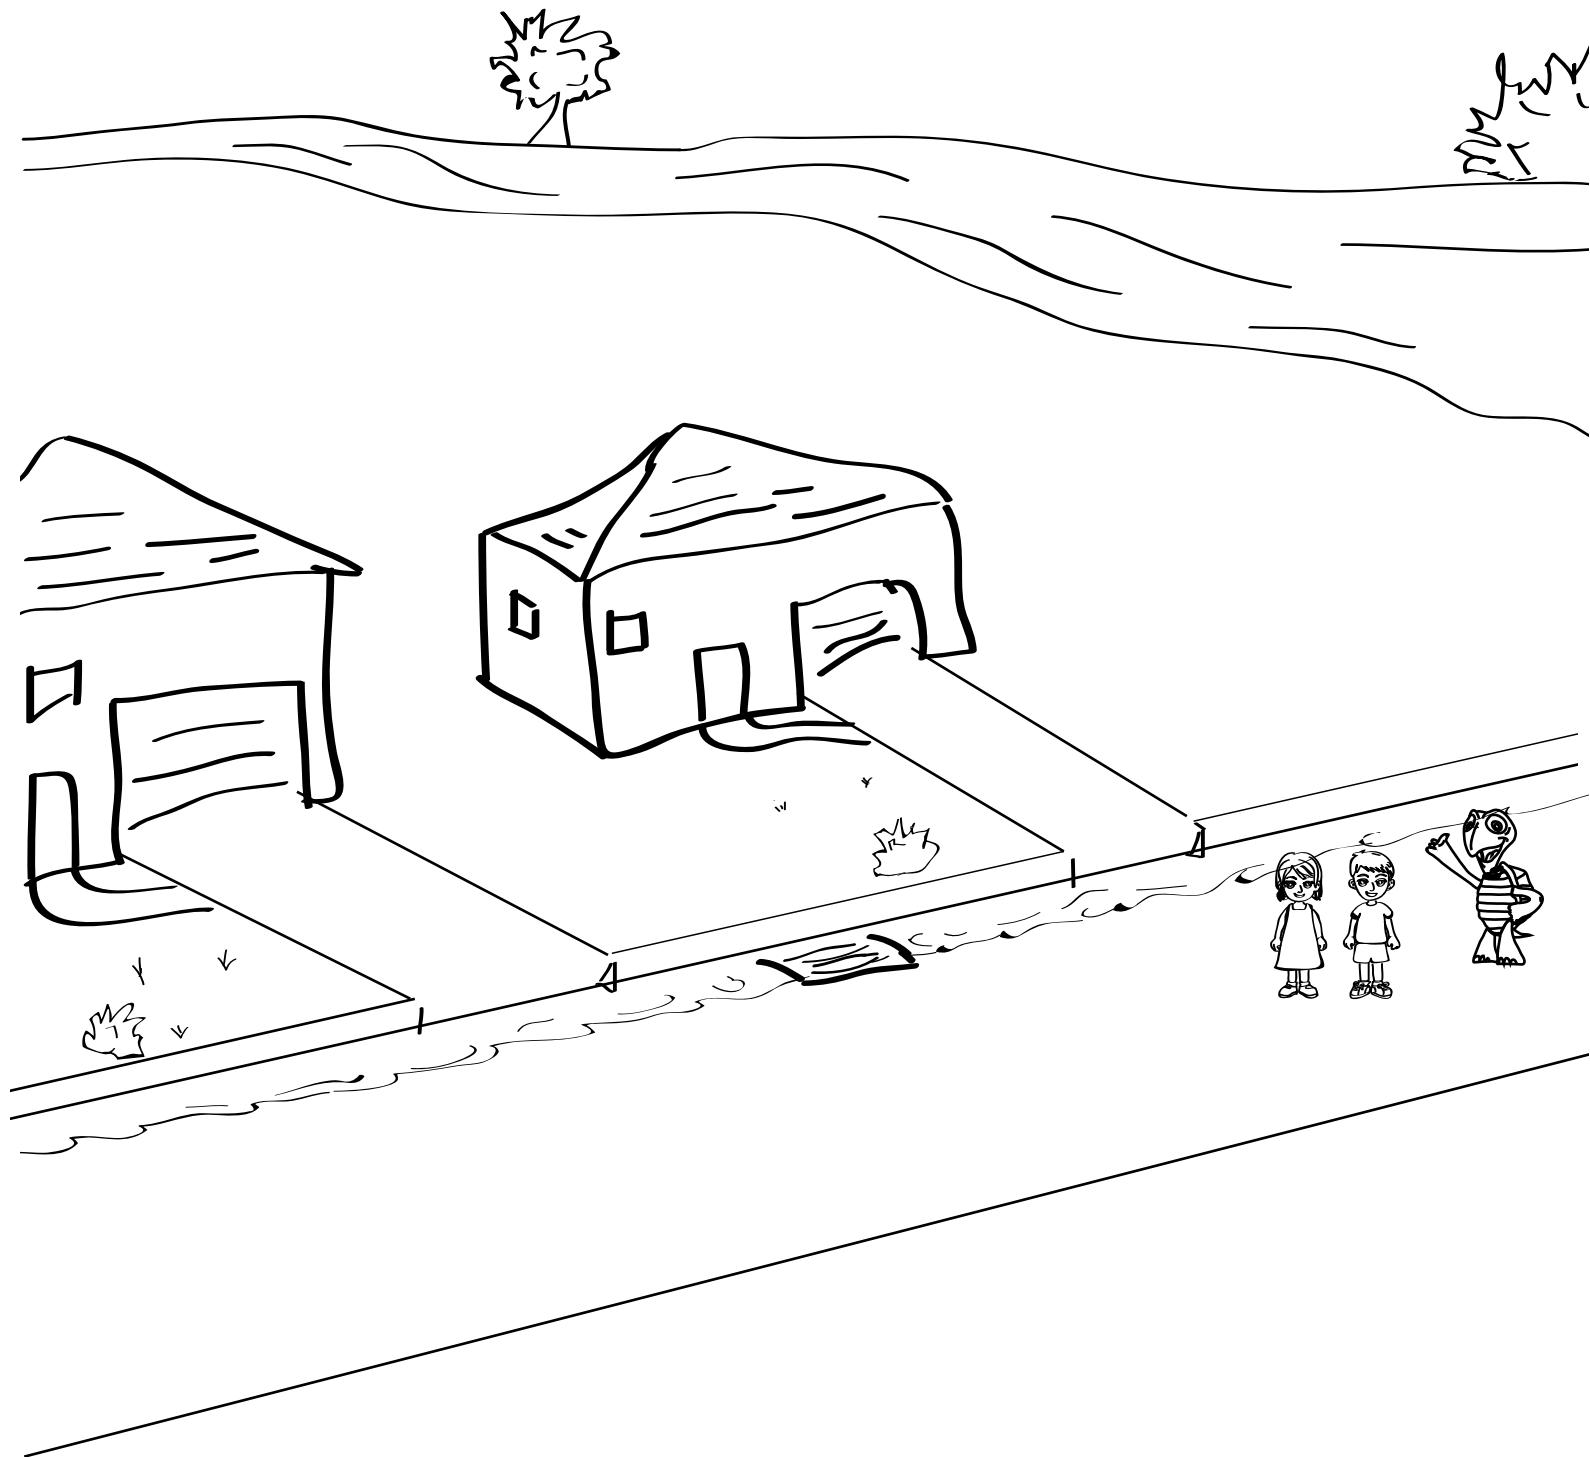

"But what's with this trash everywhere?" he asks. Jordan and Ashley frown. "I guess we'll try somewhere else" they say.

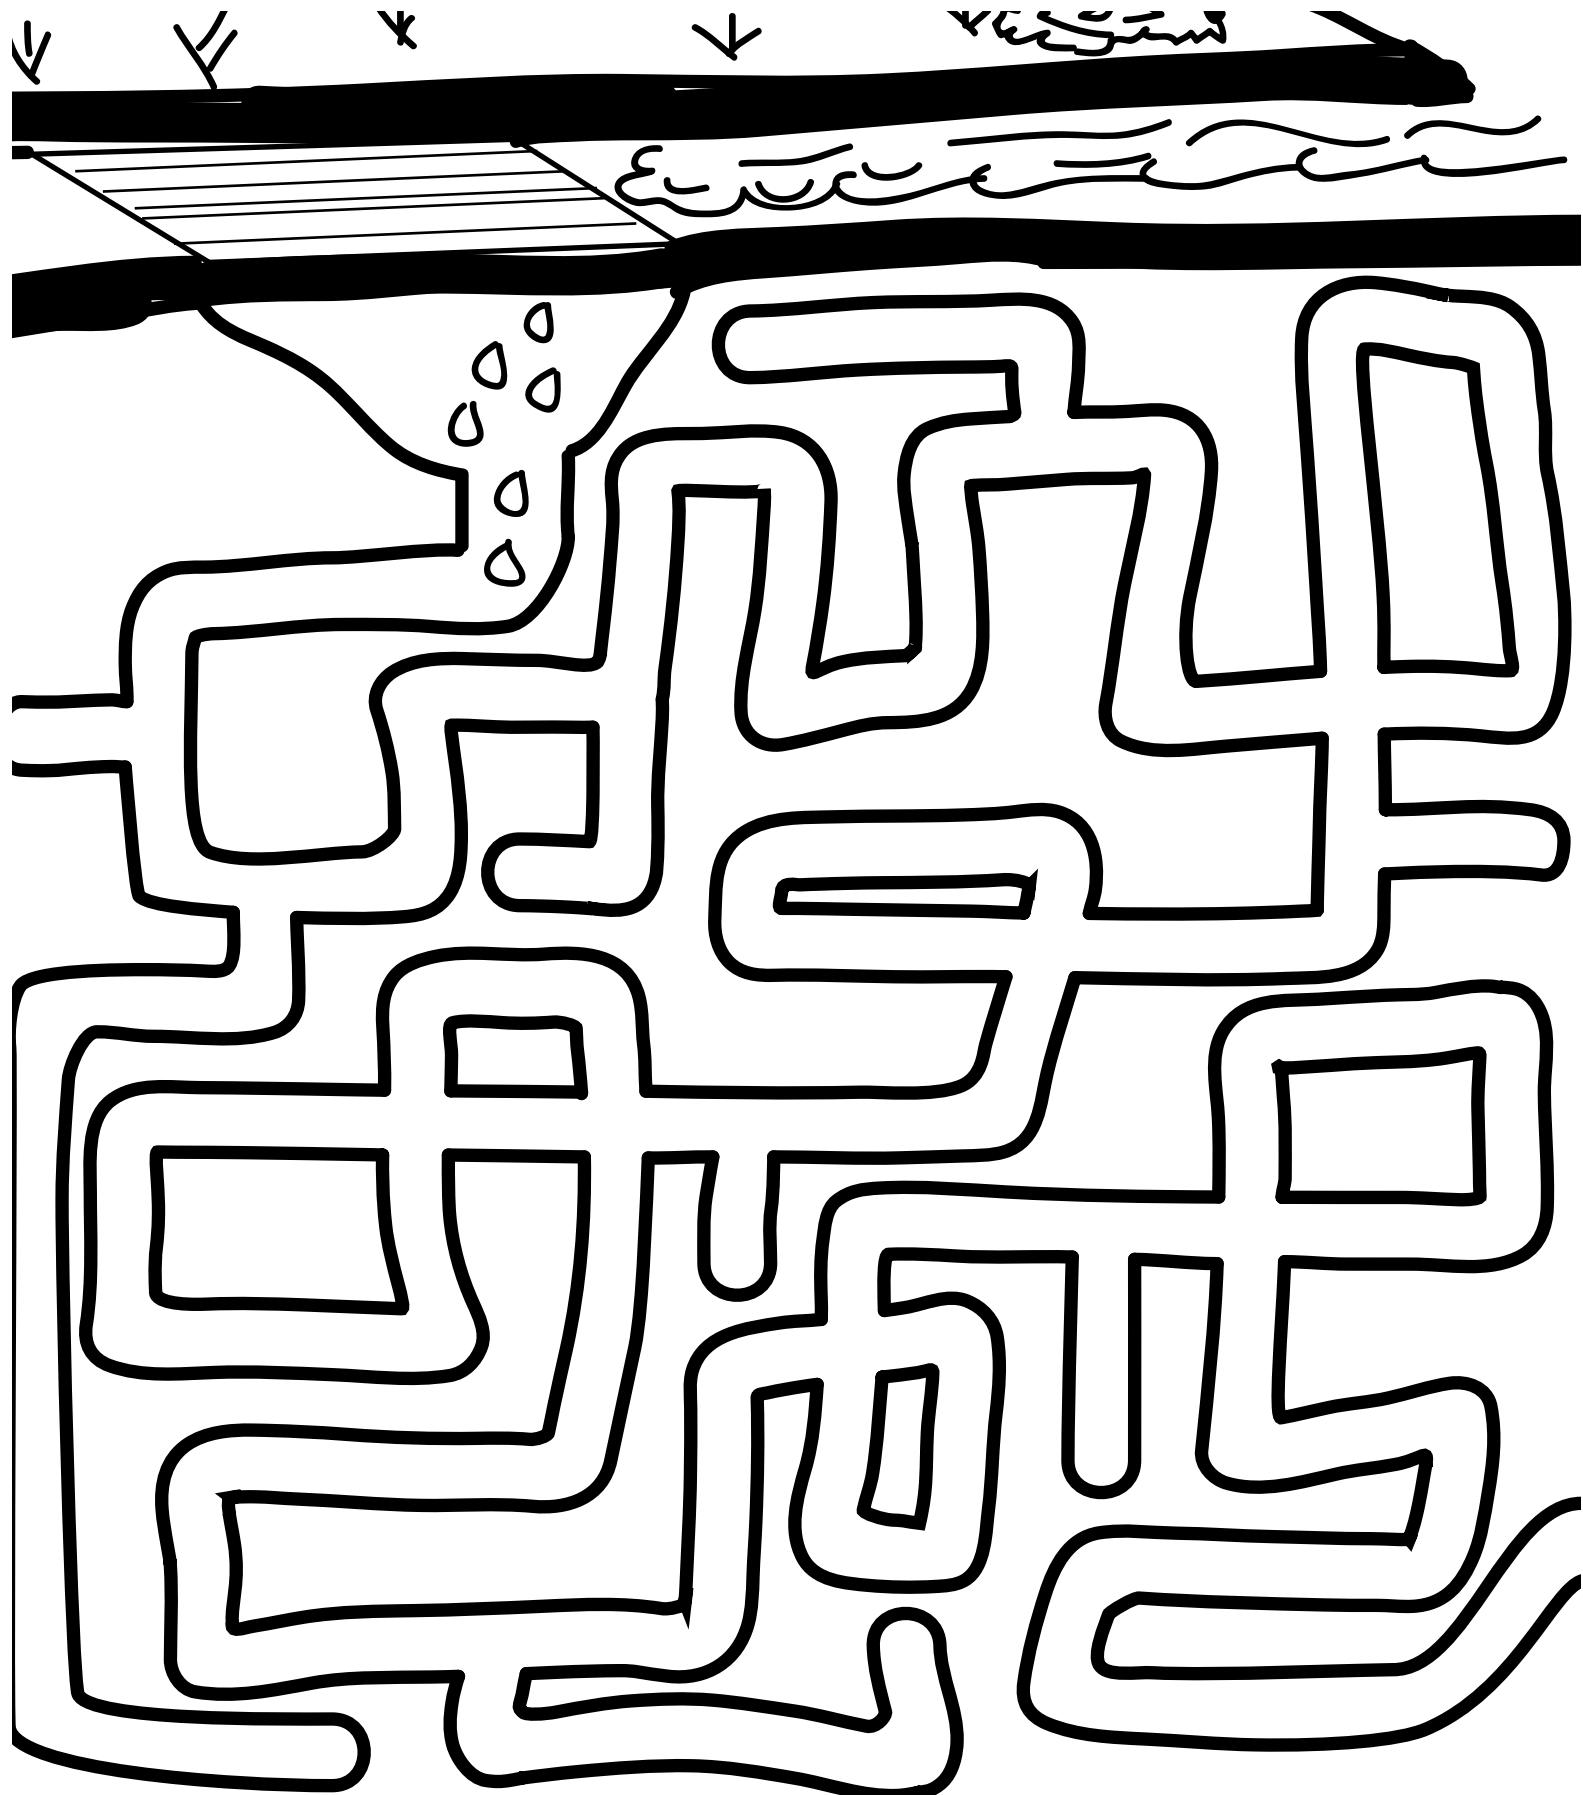

Where should these items go?
Draw a line from the object on the left to its correct home: the trash can, the recycling bin, or the pond.

Jordan and Ashley take Tortuga to the Salamander River. "Look how big this river is! And the neighborhood looks really nice..."

Pipe Maze: Follow the path of the water as it moves into the storm drain, through the pipe, and to the stream.

"But what's this?" asks Tortuga. "There's paint everywhere and it's coming out of that pipe." Jordan and Ashley get a little embarrassed. "I suppose we'll need to go somewhere else" they say.

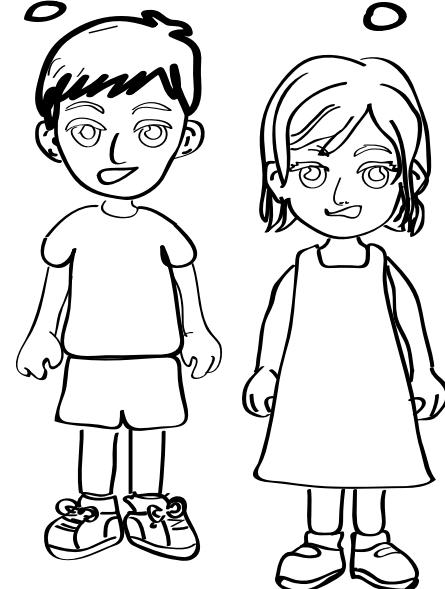

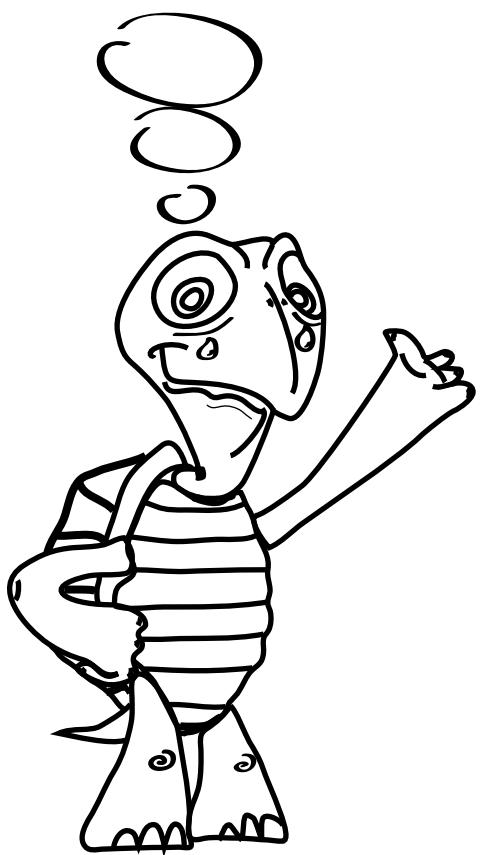

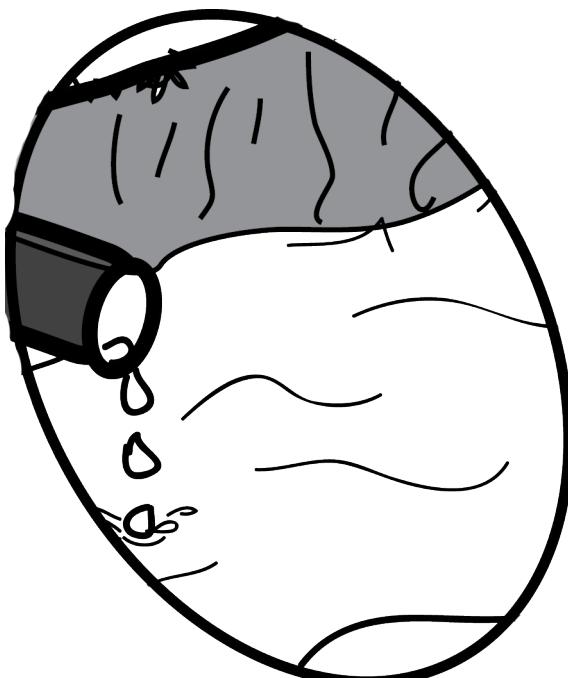

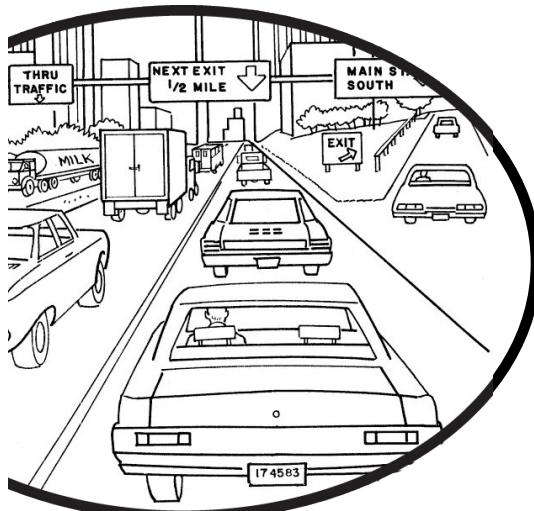

Jordan and Ashley take Tortuga to Snail Creek. "Look at all the other animals! I would have so many friends here!" exclaims Tortuga.

"But what's this? It looks like there is oil in the creek" cries Tortuga.

"Where does all of this bad stuff come from, Tortuga?" asks Jordan and Ashley. "Sometimes, people don't throw their trash away in the right place or they spill something and don't know how to clean it up," says Tortuga. "All these things get washed into storm drains and then end up in our streams and rivers."

Jordan and Ashley have a great idea.
"What if we clean it all up?"

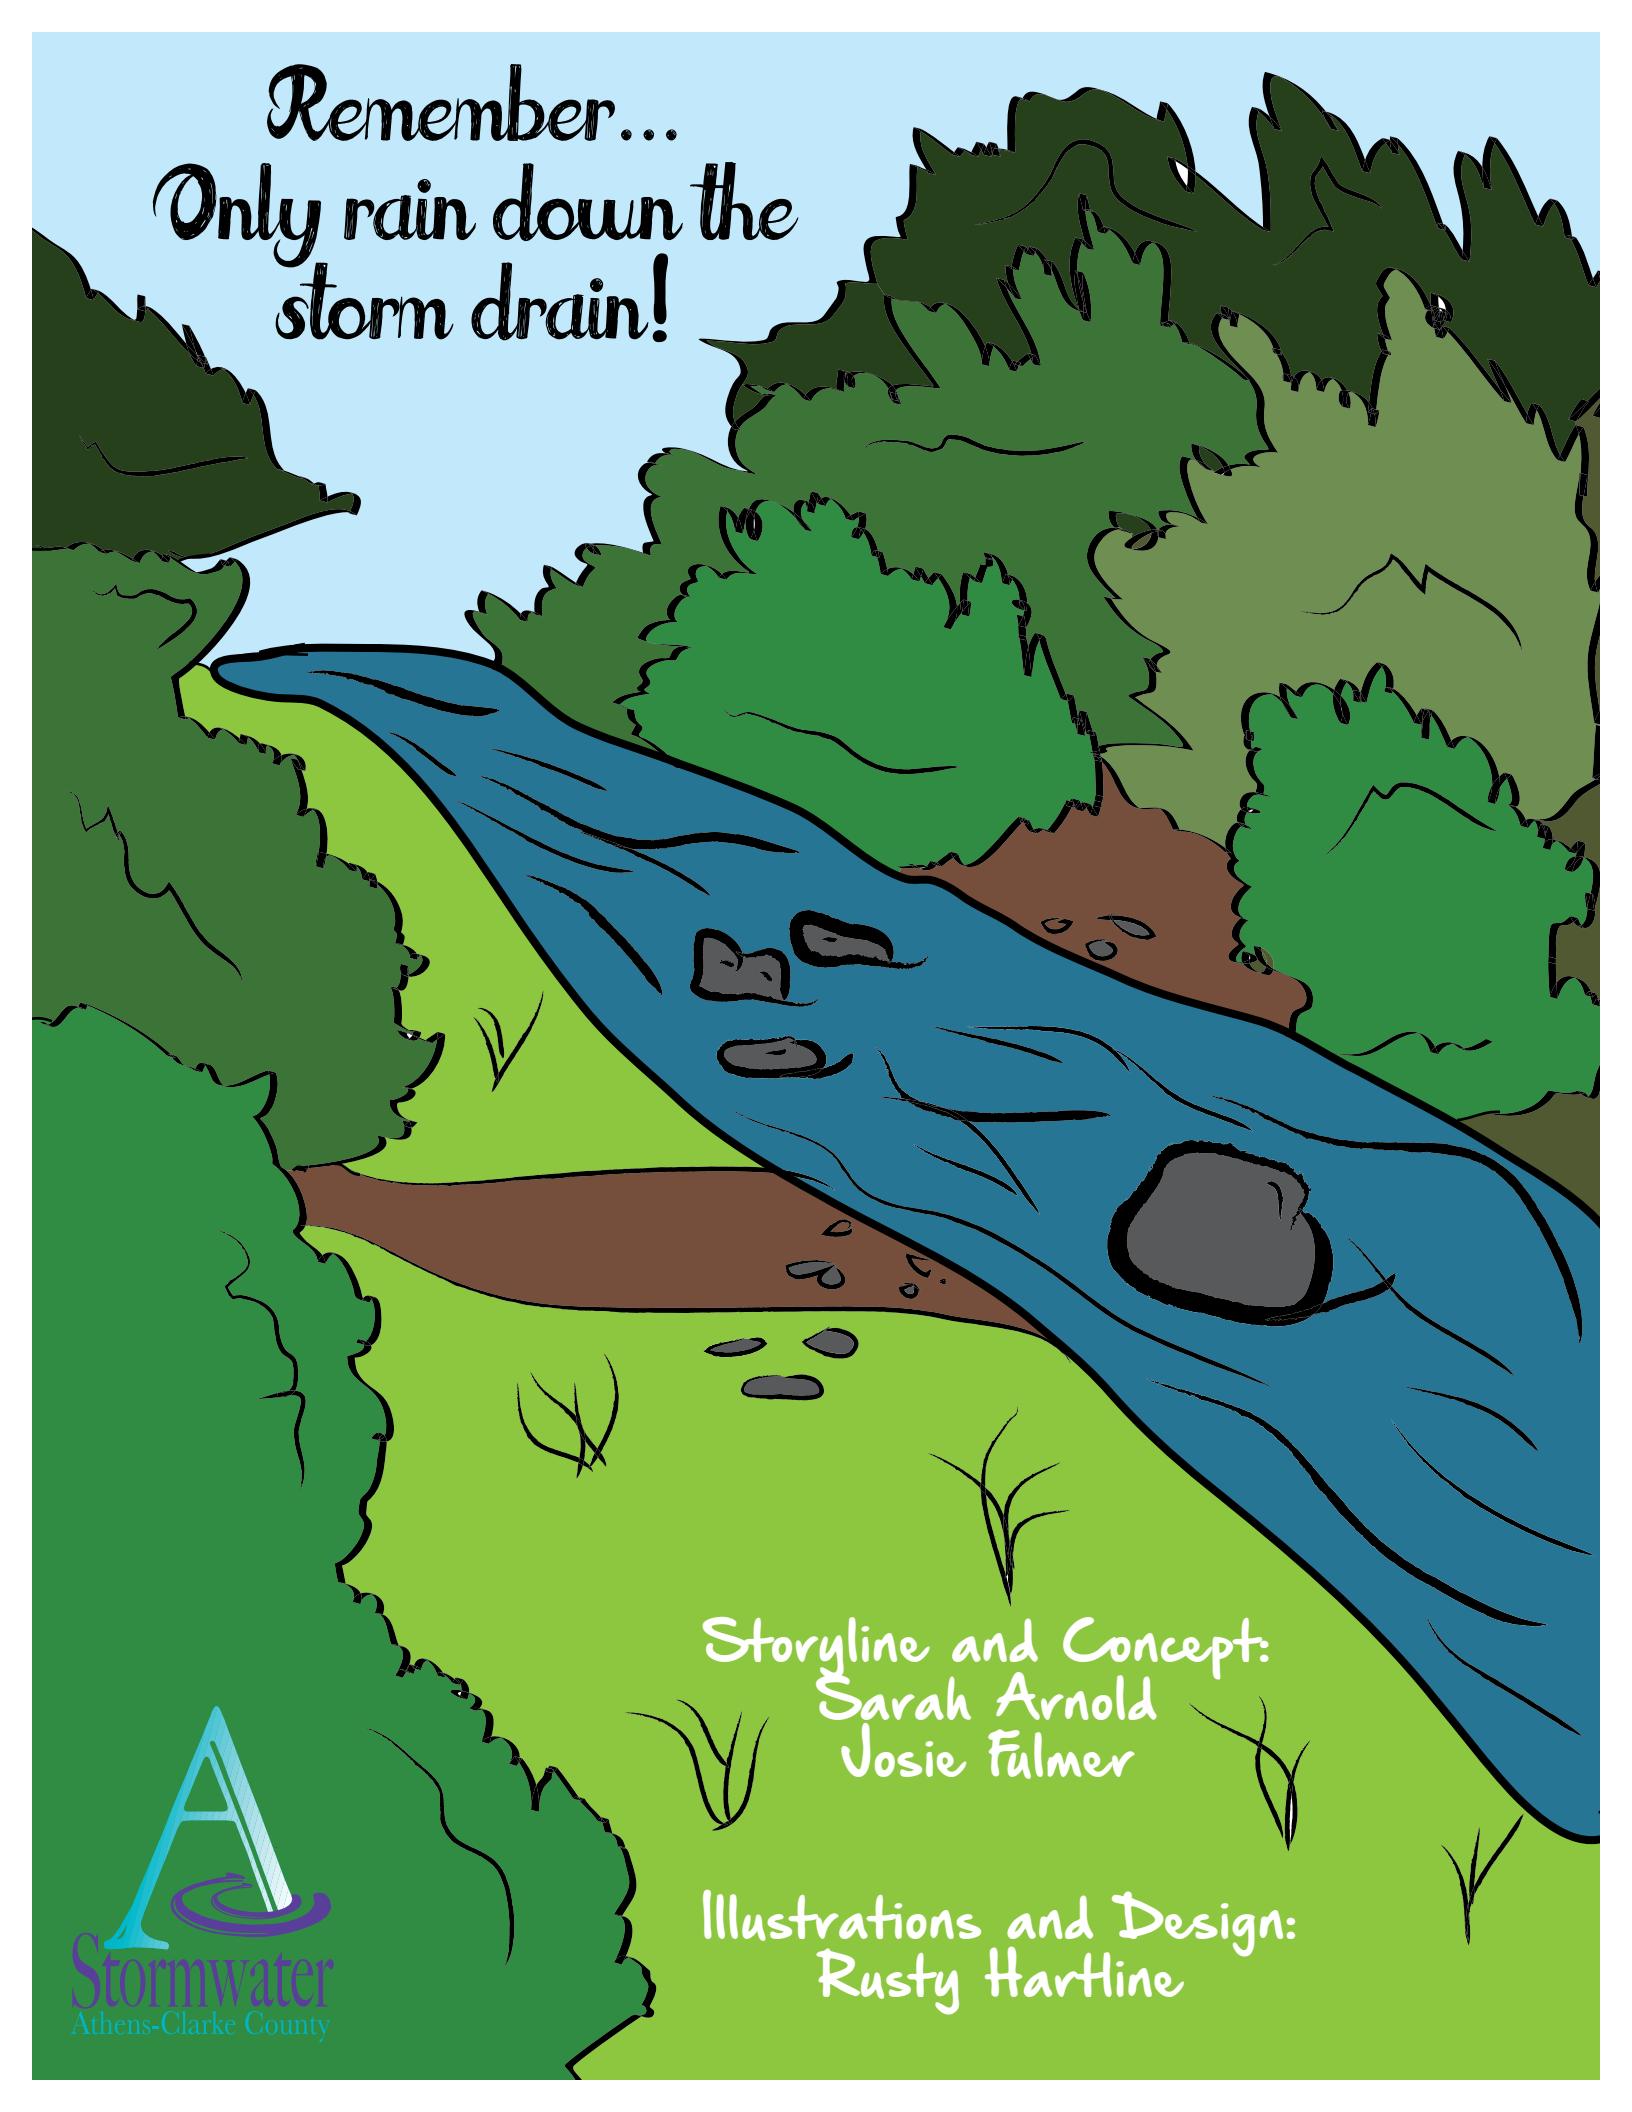

Connect the dots to draw some of Tortuga's friends.

"Thanks for cleaning up my home, everyone"
Tortuga says. "Now all my friends are here!"

Remember...
Only rain down the storm drain!

Storyline and Concept:
Sarah Arnold
Josie Fulmer

Illustrations and Design:
Rusty Hartline